custom snooze timer

Hello,

The snooze function desperately needs a customizable timer; it should be possible to select when a specific reminder should re-appear (something like "remind again in x minutes/hours/days"), instead of the default setting of 60 seconds. For example, I have the reminder for birthdays set to 14 days in advance - but I would also like to be reminded about seven days in advance again (depending on whether I gotta get a gift or not ;)).

I just noticed that right-clicking an alarm window allows you to set a different interval for the snooze timer (from 1 minute to 2 hours).
It'd be great if there was an additional menu item that brings up a simple input box to enter a custom number of minutes/hours/days for the snooze timer.

I'm sorry, I must be uncommonly stupid :S, but I don't see anything of that sort in the contextual menu of an alarm : There are the usual settings of Rainlendar, but nothing about snooze... (see included PNG)

Can you telle me more, please ?

Try right-clicking directly on the respective item - in this case, "plan formation pour CM" (a lecture notes reminder?).
I don't have Rainlendar with me here at work, otherwise I'd post a screenshot.

Thanx a lot. It must be the only place where I didn't right-clicked... But yes, it yields another item in the menu, allowing to choose the snooze time ! Great !! But not easy to find ;)

(In fact, it's a reminder about the training of one of my guys)

Glad I could help. :)

I still hope there'll be a custom timer option though!

(All those years of learning French at school, and I'm not even able to properly translate a simple phrase like that - what a pity...)

Sure. It'd be easier, and I could set a longer default time...

Don't worry... French is slowly disappearing! It's the utmost fashion using english words (usually out of their real meaning); suppressing all the "small words" to mimic american language, and so on...:(
