If understand you what you're saying is that the text below the days doesn't move with the days (for each month, of course) ?

If that's right, when i click on the arrow buttons the text doesn't move either.

I had some similar problem with another skin. The fact is that you're calling the function allstart() when the window initialize and this only occurs when create. When you change the month allstart() isn't called.

You need to:

- * add in Initialize Rainlendar_SetEventHandler(allstart, 13, window) to call allstart()
- * you can now remove allstart() in Initialize.
- * Erase the Rainlendar_Redraw(1) in allstart() because if you don't the CPU will be forever in a redraw circle.

Hope this helps you.

that's right.

first, I'm sorry.
I once modified "../Rainlendar2/scripts/months.lua" file,
so, the attach file is not whole.

You need to:

- * add in Initialize Rainlendar_SetEventHandler(allstart, 13, window) to call allstart()
- * you can now remove allstart() in Initialize.
- * Erase the Rainlendar_Redraw(1) in allstart() because if you don't the CPU will be forever in a redraw circle.

Hope this helps you.
It's really helpful, problem solved.
Thank your answer.

Its good to know that finally works.

I don't know Chinese, but some words in the skin gave me the idea that is something related to the moon. Then i though, why not a moon calendar in every day of the month?

This is the beginning of a new skin...

To Jorge_Luis:

Your idea is correct.
The text map moon phase.
such as 15th is full moon.
In Chinese, use text to show usually.

thx again.
