
Syncing to BlackBerry in Linux

I already sent this idea to Rainy in a private e-mail but thought I would also post my idea here in case there are other Linux users in this forum.

Currently Linux BlackBerry users are limited in what they can do because RIM appears to be ignoring us however the LinBerry software for Linux is our way to back-up our BlackBerry on Linux. LinBerry doesn't have calendar sync yet but with a great calendar product like Rainlendar, it would be good to see the two pieces of software work together so Linux BlackBerry users can get their calendar events on their phone.

Of course another option would be replacing the piece of crap RIM calls a calendar with Rainlendar, even if it only offers read and no write which would be one step ahead of the default RIM calendar that can not even read an .ics file stored on any server.

Thank you.
