
Calender Icon in Ubuntu Taskbar

Posted by J.One - 2012/04/28 06:14

Kimmo,

Is there any (easy) way of integrating the calendar into the Ubuntu taskbar in the same way as it is in Windows?

In Ubuntu, I can't see if the calendar is active or not. I have to minimize all windows to find my calendar. Where as in Windows, there is a separate icon next to the clock containing the day of the month (which is great!), and if I click once on that icon, the calendar appears :woohoo:

In Ubuntu there is nothing, just an active calendar which always disappears whenever when I open a few new Windows :(

If you could change this, that would be really great!

Thanks in advance.

Re: Calender Icon in Ubuntu Taskbar

Posted by Jorge_Luis - 2012/04/28 08:36

That zone of the taskbar is called tray, system tray (or systray) or tray icons.

See if this post helps you:

http://www.rainlendar.net/cms/index.php?option=com_kunena&Itemid=42&func=view&catid=3&id=16617#16619

Re: Calender Icon in Ubuntu Taskbar

Posted by J.One - 2012/04/28 16:29

That was the solution, thank you.

Also, I had to enable the systray icon manually in the settings afterwards.
