
uninstall old version first?

I'm using an older version (Rainlendar version 0.22.1 (build on Jan 21 2006)).

Since the latest version will install in a directory with a name containing the version number (\Rainlendar2), I assume I should remove the old version first otherwise I will end up with two versions on my system, right?

And I should make a copy my events file first, and after installing the new version I should then copy the events file to that new location? Or just import them?

My suggestion is to backup first. Then install the new version and if all went well uninstall the old one. The new version will import the old files automatically (or well, it asks your permission first) if it can find them. You can also do that manually later.
