
Rainlendar does not let me add additional events

Posted by rainlendarclient - 2013/09/11 01:19

Seems to be a bug.

I have a list full of events for the current week. I'm trying to set up a system and so on Sunday after the current week; adding an event does not conform.

The event simply appears and then it disappears. The current week only have 2-3 events in each day.

for me the same, but only with my google calendar. A test ics calendar works fine.

Totally confirm this behavior on my end with latest Version Win7 64bit.
Started like one or two days ago.

New Beta Version fixed it for me, so far.

Please upgrade to the latest beta version and see if that fixes the problem. The beta also has support for the "Google Calendar (v3)" so try that as well. If the beta doesn't work either please run Rainlendar in the debug mode and send the debug log to Rainlendar's support address and include a link to this forum thread.

This has just started happening here too :(I try to add event, it briefly shows in raincalendar, then disappears! I have found that I can add event via google calendar webpage and it then appears in rainlendar - but not the other way round! Hope this is fixed soon as I use rainlendar every day.

Update: I've just installed latest beta 2.12 beta 133 (Windows 64bit) and all is working again :woohoo:

Same problem here. Rainlendar worked fine for years, and suddenly I can't add events anymore - they disappear after a second or so. I still can add events via google calender.

I don't want to install a beta version, it has no installer and i don't to lose the changes I made in my configuration in the past. So how do we handle this new bug?

I have the same problem. If I add a calendar event locally it shows briefly and then disappears. Adding the same event on the web interface for google calendar results in an upload to the local rainlendar calendar on synchronization. The problem is not fixed by installing the Rainlendar ProVersion 2.11.1 (b129) 64 bit Build Mar 11 2013. It is also not fixed by limiting the number of uploads from google calendar to the last 2 years or even 6 months.

It is not acceptable to require users to fix a bug by installing a Beta in paid software. In any case, I do not see any beta version on the listed downloadable binaries. Please tell me which listed 64-bit binary version to roll back to until this problem is fixed? I think that updates should not remain posted for users when this kind of bug has been found. And a warning should be posted for users on the web pages, so that we don't waste time wondering what happened to our setups.

Sorry for being so frank, but this is frustrating.

same problem here... I also described it in http://www.rainlendar.net/cms/index.php?option=com_kunena&Itemid=42&func=view&catid=3&id=19871#19871

I use ubuntu 13.04 32bit. Where can I get this beta version update? I cannot find it... please advise.

This is really annoying!

please also give a detailed manual on how to install this beta version if it is not a regular .deb file.

OK, I installed the beta Version 2.12 (b133) 64 bit

Build on Aug 17 2013 for Linux, on top of the previous version using the GUI provided by Ubuntu 12.04.

All went well (apart from a warning that the Beta is not suitable for daily use!). Then I followed the instruction for adding an additional calendar for Google tasks, and that worked too.

Adding an event now works as expected. The locally added event in rainlendar appeared in the remote google calendar.
