You are not giving much information about the problem. What "things" are not shown?

on the month calender you can see all your tasks and events for that day but i have days where i have only the lines of the tasks and events without the letters so i can make out what it is (yes i can stand on it with my mouse and then i can see). how can i change it so i can see it in month view?

I hope you understand now.

Maybe there is not enough room in the event to display the text? Can you attach a screenshot?

The reason why the texts are not shown is that there are too many events on the same day or on some day in the same week so there is no room for the text. You could try to increase the size of the month window so that the days are larger. Or change the skin to show less than 6 weeks so the remaining weeks can have more height. The "preshowcount" and "postshowcount" can be used to adjust how many weeks are shown (you need to edit the skin's xml file).

how do you do that?

I want it to show no past weeks and 2 or 3 weeks in the present?

How do i do that?

and i use ''your'' skin Chromophore..

And can you automatically set the categories to show different colors or something cause i want things to pop out..

(and standard ''Diversen'' is yellow ''important is red but the rest doesnt have any color, any way to give (some) categories random colors??)

can somebody please do this for me?

You can find instructions how to edit the skins from Rainlendar's help. You need to uncompress the skin and edit the monthview.xml file. The pre- and postshowcount attributes are in the element. You can find more details about the attributes from the skin reference in the help.

The category icons in Chromophore are images so you cannot change their color automatically. You can use the category editor to choose a different icons for the categories though.

If look there The pre- and postshowcount attributes are both 0, i have changed the latter to 3 and the first stays 0, does that change anything?? (and is that all i have to change, in order for it to show in the calendar?)

And how do i put the skin ''back together'' and with that i mean so that i can choose it in the skin menu in rainlendar??

Hope you can help me, to illustrate my (desperate) need for (your) assistance, this is what my calender looks like:

Try like this:
* Uncompress the skin
* Open MonthView.xml with a text editor
* Set the attribute values like this:
 keeptodayinplace="1"
 postshowcount="-3"
 preshowcount="1"
* Compress the skin again to a zip file (make sure to compress only the skin content and not the folder they are in)
* Rename the Chromophore.zip to ChromophoreEdited.r2skin
* Install the edited skin and select it in Rainlendar

it keeps saying that it doesnt have a skin.xml file???

what do i do wrong?

i zipped the whole Chromophore folder (once from the outside, once from the inside) and it keeps saying it doesnt have skin.xml (while it is in there??)

The skin.xml file must be at the root of the zip archive. When you open the archive there must not be any extra folder inside (compare with the existing working skins).

cant you do it for me?

i dont understand it at all.

So i have to copy all files from the skin folder into one place with skin xml and then its right??

can you do it for me?

i mean you can do it in one second..

Here's a version without the past week. You really should try to learn how to do this yourself since the skin changes from time to time and you won't get the new features if you keep using the old version.

I can't see from the screenshot what exactly grows in size. What should I be looking at?

how should i zip the files of a skin so that the xml is there too, thats the only thing i dont know, thank you thou, and where can you see the changelog of Chromophore??

and, if you maximize the screenshot, youll see that the windows in month view grow as the row goes down (the 7 Jul. window is bigger than 30th of june, 30the of june is bigger than the 23rd window, and the 23rd windows is bigger than the 16th window)

the new skin doesnt work:

1) month view shows nothing:

2) cant adjust height of month view:

I probably updated the latest version of the skin which requires the beta version. Try this instead.

You can repackage the skin like this:

 http://www.rainlendar.net/cms/images/fbfiles/images/Screen_Shot_2014_07_01_at_19.png

* Select all files and folders
* Right click over the skin.xml
* Choose Send to -> Compressed (zipped) folder
* Rename the created "skin.zip" to ChormophoreEdited.r2skin

The changelog for the skins can be read from the Options->Skins. It's very brief though and very likely does not include all the minor changes that are made to the skin.

As far as I can tell the size of the days are same on all weeks...

now i have found another problem, i cant scroll back and forth between months as if. i mean when i scroll on to August, the activities remain the same, and same goes for when i want to scroll back to october last year..

The view as is (that you only see this week and on), is perfect but does that mean i will never be able to see past or present month ever again??

is there a way to keep this stunning "present day/week" view and still be able to scroll between months as seperate things as well??, is that possible?

The next/previous month doesn't seem to work correctly. I'll see if it can be fixed. You should note though that the display month is global so if the calendar does not show all the days in the month then advancing a month can skip some of the days.
