
Calender Won't move with change in monitor

First of all, great product. I am using a IBM Z60M ThinkPad on a docking station. The default monitor is a widescreen and I have the calender on the right hand side of the screen 960x600 resolution. The docking station is using a standard monitor which I use a 800x600 resolution. The problem is when I put the labtop on the docking station, I only see a portion of the calender and I have to move it with the mouse. Is there a way to use it on both monitors without moving it each time. Thanks.

At the moment the resolution change doesn't automatically move the windows. I'll add this to my todo list.

I second this request. I licensed the product as soon as it was available because of the outlook synch, but I occasionally switch from a 1400x1050 res on my laptop to a 1280x1024 res on an external monitor. Having it dock to the side of the window would be fantastic.

i've just upgraded from 0.19.1 and am confused as to the position of the calendar.. its sat bag smack in the middle of my screen and i can't see where to change the x/y co-ordinates?

i've downloaded and am using an older skin - SimpleNoteGerman 1.0 (which i'm customising to English..

before i had 9 months lined up at the bottom of my screen but i can't see where to add this option in the newer version..

here's a screen shot - i'm on a tripple display - 2x1600x1200 and 1x1024x768..

i've shrunk it to save on space/file size..
