
windows icon tray

Posted by carl - 2006/10/29 21:26

Maybe not a bug, but still...

If you're like me you like to activate "the hide inactive icons" in the system tray. But ofcourse I have configured the rainlendar icon to "always show".

The problem is that every new day, windows thinks of rainlendar as a new app because its a different icon (because of date change).
So therefore it hides automaticly the next day if you don't do something active in rainlendar. And that's not a good thing..

So the "buxfix" must be to make windows believe it's the same app?

regards
Carl

Re:windows icon tray

Posted by hal9001 - 2006/10/30 15:31

wow. I just noticed it myself...

Re:windows icon tray

Posted by Rainy - 2006/10/31 15:09

Windows keeps hiding the icon for some reason no matter what I try to do. The framework doesn't give me all the same possibilities as a native Windows app would but I try to do something about it.
