Hi vijayFH !

First thing, about the rssweather.com website, the RegExp= of the WebParser plugin of the measure for the Rss feed of rssweather.com is not working anymore, even in the default skin "Tranquil" of Rainmeter (probably need to be parse again). But it could also be replaced by an another Rss source or website.

And the second thing, I don't know what is your native language, but in this skin the weather data is made to be display in French, like in your image that you have posted, "Vent" is the French translation for "Wind" in English.
In your case the weather section in the .ini file need to be done again, from a new weather Rss source or website* and to be displayed in your native language, unless French is your language !

*(from my side I parse the weather data that I want directly from the webpage of my location on the theweathernetwork.com)

O.k then I will help you ! ;)

I found the skin that you're using and I have downloaded it, I will make the change in this one and give you the folder after, I think it will be more easier this way because I lot of things will change in the .ini file, and some images name will change also.

Right now I'm doing some test on the location of Berlin, Germany, but if you give me your location I will change Berlin for yours

Preview (I have added the moonphase option in the skin)...
